NORFOLK, VA., December 77.—(Spe-Nal.)—The cases against Ella Kennedy alias the "Gypsy Queen," charging, her having thrown polson on the muel Griffin, and killing a horse belonging to Mrs. Griffin and several goats, and with having poisoned the geese of Della Shears, was called to-day in the Police Court. Both cases were sent on to the grand jury, and the accused was sent o jail. The penalty is from one to ten years in the penitentiary.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.

The United States naval apprenticeship Essex, after two months at the navy-yard, left this morning, and, with the United States steamship Atlanta, proceeded to Hampton Roads, en route to join the apprentice squadron at Newport.

The Alliance, on leaving here, will go to Newport to take the place of the old wooden apprentice-ship Portsmouth, which has been condemned as unfit for further service, and will go in Rotten Row at the Brooklyn yard. The Atlanta will go to New York, and leave there for the West Indies to relieve the new United States steamship Columbia, which whip comes to the navy-yard here for United States steamship Columbia, which ship comes to the navy-yard here for overhauling and repairs. The departure of the Atlanta and Essex leaves only the Marblehead and Raleigh in the hands of the workmen, the Atlance being finished.

and has been in Migation for several years.

Mr. Robert J. Walker, the defeated Republican candidate for Congress, was in Harrisonburg to-day. He said he had abandoned his intention to contest Major Turner's seat, because he had never been able to satisfy himself that he had been beaten by fraud, and that he had no desire for any office to which he was not fairly entitled. Mr. Walker says he believes he would have been elected under the old law, but thinks Turner was possibly elected in a legal manner under the Walton law. Well-informed Democrats think that Turner's majority would have been considerably larger but for prejudice among Democrats against the new law.

THE JACKSON CITY MURDER.

one Craven and His Dead Victim-Prisoner's Version of the Crime. Prisoner's Version of the Crime.

Thomas Craven, the slayer of Reuben Milis at Jackson City Monday night, was taken to Alexandria on Tuesday afternoon by Deputy-Sheriff B. F. Matthews, of that county. Cravens was glad to go, being tired of the uncomfortable cell in which he was confined at the First Police Precinct Station, at Washington, and anxious for a preliminary hearing. The body of Milis was also removed to Alexandria by the County Coroner, who was, however, unable to make any statement in regard to the holding of an inquest.

HIS STORY.

HIS STORY.

Craven surrendered to two Washington officers, and gave the following account of the crime:

"When I entered the saloon at Jackson City," said Craven to a Washington Post reporter, "Mills was sitting at the table in the back room. I went in and sat down opposite him. He was abusing the waiter at a great rate, and I said something to him in a pleasant way, and then he turned on me and commenced abusing me, calling me all sorts of names. Suddenly he jumped up, ran around to my side of the table, and struck me. I jumped up and tried to defend myself. He was much stronger than I, and knocked me down. Then he began kicking me in the face and chest. He broke my nose, and my shoulders are all bruised from his kicks. Several of the men caught hole of him and held him, and I got up and went in the bar-room. My nose was bleeding, and I could feel my face swelling. I looked in a mirror to see how bad I was hur.
"Just then I glanced through the door into the dining-room, and I saw Mills, with a chair ralsed, coming at me. I had "Just then I glanced through the door into the dining-room, and I saw Mills, with a chair raised, coming at me. I had noticed the revolver lying inside of the bar, and I grabbed it up and fired with-cut taking aim. I am sure that he had the chair in his hands and was coming at me with it, instead of having it for the purpose of defending himself. Where I fired he may have lifted the chair up in front of him right quick.

"That is the way it happened. I had atways been friendly with him." DID JEALOUSY PROMPT THE MUR-

DID JEAIOUSY PROMPT THE MURDER?

According to the story told by some of the race-followers at Alexandria Island track yesterday the Virginia authorities will be able to develop a sensational feature in connection with the murder of Mills by Craven. They laughed at the idea that the only motive for the killing was the beating which Craven had received just before he took Tom Welch's revolver out of a drawer in the bar-room. They say that jealousy prompted the deed, beyond a doubt. It appears that Mills, who was a very large man, with a generosity proportionate to his size, gained the affections of a woman of the "division" class, to whose wiles Craven had succumbed a year or so before. The latter did not take kindly to the badinage of mutual friends who were aware of the situation. When in the company of Mills he was friendly to all outward appearances, and they were in the habit of sitting down to meals and drinking together. It was when Mills was absent that Craven would make remarks about "getting even some day," and that his "turn would come after a while."

The bartender at Joe Thomas's place, where the two were accustomed to spend their time when not about the racing-stables, and where the shootling occurred, seems to have expected that Craven would seek revenge for being "cut out," and it is surmised that Craven made a confident of him. It is also said that he knows the woman who was the indirect cause of the killing, and could tell some very interesting things tending to show premeditation 'f he were summoned as a witness and properly catechised.

The whole force is equipped for the field, and can all be in active service in twenty-four hours. Four times during this year the Guard was called on for duty in guarding prisoners. Aid was promptly rendered. Seventy-eight enlist-ed men obtained honorable discharges during 1894 and twelve were dishonorably discharged. That there is a decided and discharged. That there is a decided and steady increase in military spirit in the State, despite the abolition of fancy sol-dlering and uniforms, is shown by the fact that since February, 1893, no less than twenty-six applications for permission to organize companies have been received. The Adjutant-General recom-mends that the troops be rationed and mends that the troops be rationed and given some compensation while in camp.

NUMBERS IN SERVICE. The strength of the Guard is as follows First Regiment, infantry, 334; Second 356; Third, 337; Fourth, 339; unattachecompanies, 83; Navai Reserve, 145; brigade staff, 8; general staff, 18. Total, 1,620, or 225 less than last year. Eighty-eight per cent. were present at inspections. All the arms and clothing are furnished by the United States. Twelve hundred blank-ets have just been furnished. The Naval Reserve is well armed with howitzers Gatlings, and Lee magazine rifles. Good work was done at the encampment, as the reports show.

Barlieg, the executor, is heard, would say nothing. Mr. Barling says that he will not resign his position as trustee or executor of the estate of Mrs. Green's father.

From New Bedford, Mass. comes a denial of the story that the will of Sylvia Ann Howland, Mrs. Green's aunt, was procured by improper influence, or that she was poisoned. Dr. Gordon, who attended her, and was one of the best-known physicians in New England, was compelled to inject morphine during Miss Howland's last days, and from this fact Mrs. Green somehow got the idea that Miss Howland's death was hastened by an excessive use of the drug.
